Blood drives comes as supplies dwindle

Due to a critically low supply of blood, the Coffee Memorial Blood Center will hold a "Back the Brave" Boots & Badges blood drive honoring first responders on July 6 during the Saints' Roost Celebration.

The Blood Drive will be hosted by the Clarendon Lions Club, and the Bloodmobile will be parked at the Lions Hall from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. to take donations.

Two previous blood drives here and around the area have not been well attended, resulting in there only being a two-day supply of blood available currently. One major emergency could quickly wipe that supply out.

Clarendon Lions and Coffee Memorial hope people attending the Saints' Roost Celebration will step up and save a life. Donors can schedule their appointments by calling 877-340-8777 or online at obi.org or just walk over to the Bloodmobile on July 6 at the Lions Hall.

Christ's Kids needs money, volunteers

The Christ's Kids Outreach Ministry is looking for volunteers and donations as it works to provide lunches for local kids this summer.

Each week, volunteers prepare and deliver lunch to an average of 130 kids in Clarendon and Howardwick, five days a week. They get a hot meal, juice box, fruit snacks, chips, and cookies each day. Meals consist of chicken nuggets, hot dogs, corn dogs, tacos, sloppy joes, and taco burgers.

There is an urgent need for volunteers to help and for donations to keep this ministry going. If you would like to volunteer some time each week, please call 806-205-1096. Donations can be made to Christ's Kids, PO Box 45, Clarendon, TX 79226.

Clarendon's Patron Saint

Cornelia Adair looks over Clarendon with her husband John Adair's image coming into focus as the downtown ranch heritage mural continues to reveal itself this week through the skillful art of Malcolm Byers. If Saints' Roost were to have a patron saint, Mrs. Adair might be the leading candidate for her lifetime of philanthropy to Clarendon. Her gifts to the community included the Adair Hospital (now the Saints' Roost Museum) and the YMCA Building (later Clarendon City Hall and now Clarendon's Fire Hall.)

Stauder gets 'trip of a lifetime' to DC

Clarendon's Tom Stauder says it was "the trip of a lifetime" when he joined about 85 other veterans from the Panhandle and South Plains on an Honor Flight to the nation's capital.

Stauder was accompanied by his grandson, Bobby Tyler, in a group of about 125 people for the South Plains Honor Flight, which started Friday, May 31. Stauder and ten others had served in the Korean War. About 74 others had served in Vietnam.

A luncheon on the campus of Texas Tech University was the first gathering of the veterans, their companions, and members of the South Plains Honor Flight, and they all received matching red shirts. The group flew to Washington, DC, arriving at the Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport followed by a visit to the World War II Veterans Memorial, where Stauder said it was neat to see the old military uniforms. The group then went to the Pentagon Memorial commemorating the lives lost in the September 11, 2001, attacks.

"It was very impressive in that there were monuments with names for each of the 125 people killed when the airplane crashed into the building," Stauder said.

Sunday morning's tour began with Arlington National Cemetery and the Changing of the Guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, which he said was "very impressive."

The Women's Military Memorial and the Seabee Memorial were next, followed by the US Marine Corps War Memorial, which depicts the raising of the flag on Iwo Jima.

"That was impressive seeing the GIs placing the flag pole with our flag of the United States," he said.

The National Museum of the US Army was the first stop of the afternoon.

"We got a great view of how the Army weapons have changed over all those years," he said. "As the oldest mobile vet, I placed the wreath at the memorial."

The next stop was the group's longest — the Air & Space Museum.

"To me, because there are so many unknowns our scientists need to discover, I found this to be the most interesting," Stauder said.

Dinner Saturday evening featured a keynote address by Phillip Waite, managing director of the Vietnam veterans organization.

"He recognized and presented pins to our Korean veterans as well as the larger group of Vietnam veterans," Stauder said. "He also gave a great

Regional job market thrives; Donley numbers lagging

The Panhandle Workforce Development Area (WDA) continues to maintain the second-lowest unemployment rate in Texas at 2.9 percent, but Donley County trails the rest of the region.

Donley County's unemployment rate rose to 4.1 percent this month with 60 people looking for work. That's up from 3.5 percent in April when 52 people were on the jobless roll. During that time, the workforce shrank from 1,482 to 1,475, and the number of people employed fell from 1,430 to 1,415.

The local job market has improved from this time in 2023. At that time, 1,397 people were working out of a labor force of 1,446. May 2023 saw 49 Donley County residents unemployed at a rate of 3.4 percent.

From April to May, Amarillo's unemployment rate increased slightly, rising from 2.6 percent to 2.8 percent. Similarly, the Panhandle WDA saw its unemployment rate go up by 0.2 percentage points, from 2.6 percent to 2.8 percent.

Over the past year, the Panhandle's labor force expanded from 212,667 to 215,024. In Amarillo, the workforce grew by 1,262, increasing from 104,742 to 106,004.

All 26 counties in the Panhandle saw slight increases or stable unemployment, with Hartley County having the lowest rate at 2.0 percent and Hall County the highest at 4.8 percent.

Lady Justice is blind. Why isn't the High Court?

Tragedy erupted on Oct. 1, 2017, at a country music festival in Las Vegas when a lone shooter killed 60 attendees from a 32nd story hotel window. Mainly using AR-15 style weapons with the help of a bump stock, the shooter carried out the deadliest mass shooting by a lone gunman in history.

Following the tragedy, President Donald Trump asked the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Agency to reclassify bump stocks as machine gun accessories and ban them. However, a Texas gun store owner sued the federal government on the grounds that bump stocks were wrongfully classified. This past week the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the ban on grounds having nothing to do with gun control.

Here is the thing: while there is outrage over this decision – mainly because the decision looks political with a 6-3 split along party lines – what it actually shows is a misunderstanding of the courts and possibly the biggest mistake of the Founding Fathers with the Constitution.

First, let me be clear. I am not making any Second Amendment arguments here. I have written plenty on the Second Amendment and the Founders' intentions. For this case, there is actually no need to bring up the Second Amendment. That is the misunderstanding. I am also not going to argue for or against gun control in any way. And neither did the court, or at least the six justices who voted against this ban. A large part of this ruling is that bump stocks do not make rifles automatic weapons.

There is a lot of hairsplitting here, but in legal cases, hairsplitting matters. While bump stocks allow rifles to shoot as fast as an automatic weapon, they do not make them "automatic." By definition an automatic rifle will fire more than one round with a single pull of the trigger. A bump stock works with a semi-automatic weapon which shoots one projectile per pull of the trigger. However, a bump stock uses the recoil of the rifle to create the same speed as an automatic but by definition does not make the weapon "automatic." The mechanisms are different. I understand how this can be frustrating, but there is a difference, and in law those differences matter. If people want to change the rules about what is an automatic weapon, there is a way to do that and that brings up the second and more important point.

As you read the news and listen to podcasts you are going to read and hear a lot of definitions, such as what I have done above. What you may not hear is who made these definitions. That's simple, Congress did. It did it in 1934 with The National Firearms Act. When bump stocks first became available in the early 2000s the ATF did not consider them machine guns because they did not fit under the congressional definition, and so were not regulated. It was not until Trump asked the ATF to change their classification following the Las Vegas shooting that it changed. Here is the problem: according to the U.S. Supreme Court, the ATF does not have that authority.

As I like to do when looking at legal issues, let's look at what the Constitution says about the ATF's authority. Nothing. What it does say in Article I, Section 1 is "All legislative Powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives." In other words, Congress has defined what an automatic weapon is with specific wording. Neither the ATF nor the president has the right to change it. At least based off this ruling, if Congress changed the definition of "automatic" and included bump stocks then the Court would support the ban.

I understand why this is hard. The fact that the ruling is 6-3 makes it seem political, so everyone is blaming the conservative judges. Its similar to the abortion ruling by the courts that ruled states have the right to decide the legality of abortions. It was not a moral argument, but legal one. In both cases it is hard to remove one's personal beliefs, but that is what should happen.

Lady Justice is blindfolded. She is to be blind in her ruling and must only use the law, not emotions. What is more disheartening to me is that this case was not unanimous. Three justices cared more about their own beliefs than the law. You can be for strict gun control but still see this decision as legally correct. If you are mad, be mad at Congress, not the court.

The fact that the court was split on this verdict to me shows the greatest mistake of the Founders. They believed leaders could rise above parties and self-interest. Yet time and again we have seen that is not the case. Nowhere in the Constitution do they mention parties because they hoped Americans would avoid them. They were wrong. I cannot prove this, but as a thought experiment, imagine all nine justices were polled and asked, "Can the ATF override an act of Congress?" I have to hope all nine would say no. Yet when you place before them that same question but wrapped in a polarizing, politically emotional case and you see the justices divided on party lines. They made it about gun control because especially in an election year, they play politics more than act as blind justices.

If you want gun control, don't be mad at the justices. The Constitution does not grant them power to make laws. If you are mad, get mad at Congress. Somewhere along the way in the start of the 20th century Congress got lazy. It found it easier to allow the Executive branch to do the heavy lifting. It's a lot easier to get elected if you never have to vote on the controversial issues. If you are mad at the court, be mad that they never stopped this sooner. For too long the courts have stood by and watched the Executive branch slowly usurp more and more power while the Legislature pretended to care. Maybe instead of going to the internet to trash the courts and tell them blood is on their hands, we should all take a refresh on American civics. Lesson One: Checks and Balances.

'Jeff Davis' Folly' in American West

An experiment in western American transportation, though conceded to have been a failure, is well worth remembering. Camels in America? Yes indeed!

They were brought here to traverse the great American desert, but their survival was rather short lived. Jefferson Davis, US Senator from Mississippi, advocated the camels as early as 1853.

A beast of burden that could navigate America's arid Southwest was needed, and that could only mean camels. "We must have them," he drawled. "The men who are pushing through the desert and wilderness are shouting for an animal that can go without water for days and still carry a heavy pack on its back!"

When Davis later became secretary of war under President Franklin Pierce, he got his way by convincing Congress to appropriate $30,000 for the camel experiment. Men and ships were dispatched to the Middle East to purchase seventy-eight of the beasts and to hire some of their native keepers.

It appears that two shiploads of camels arrived in Texas in 1856; one in Indianola on Matagorda Bay and one at Parsons Pier in Galveston. Upon touching the ground in Indianola, some of the camels broke loose and stampeded in the area, frightening horses and people, before being brought under control by their keepers.

In Galveston, after being hoisted from ship to shore in slings, about forty camels were herded into a nearby corral where they stayed for several months.

Although a curiosity for the younger generation, the camels were unwelcome guests of the city. Whenever the keepers exercised the camels by riding them through the city streets, the horses and mules in the same streets frequently were terrorized and would stampede. In addition, the camels exuded a very offensive smell, and they would occasionally spit at people. But the young boys were delighted at getting to ride the camels at exercise time.

Finally the time came for the westward trek. The first major stop was at Camp Verde just north of San Antonio. Being keeper of the camels was a dubious honor for Colonel Robert E. Lee, Camp Verde's commander at the time. In an expedition from Camp Verde to the Big Bend of the Rio Grande, the US Army proved that camels could outlast mules in adverse conditions or rugged terrain. Then in a caravan the camels were marched to California's Fort Tejon, just north of Los Angeles.

But by the time they got to Fort Tejon, the Civil War had started, and interest in continuing the experiment waned. Their homesick keepers went home, and the soldiers didn't know how to handle the mangy beasts. So the government auctioned the camels to various buyers. Some went to circuses as curiosities. Some went to freight companies and construction companies as beasts of burden expected to be profitable, but they proved to be more trouble than they were worth.

In 1864 Sam McLenehan bought thirty-one of the beasts and placed them on his ranch in Sonoma County, California. On April 7, 1864, he promoted the "Great Camel Race" in Sacramento. River gamblers, Chinese-laborers, and gaudy dance hall girls gathered to see the fun, but of the ten saddled camels that started the race, not one made it to the finish line. They were totally uncooperative.

Nevertheless, the camels produced a unique excitement among the people wherever they went. For several years people reported seeing stray camels wandering in various spots throughout the Southwest. Nevada even passed a law forbidding camels "from running at large on public highways." However, the law was rescinded in 1889 when it was realized that there weren't any wild camels left. The camels had had their day, but now it was over.

"DON'T WORRY...HE'S ABOUT TO GO OUTSIDE TO MOW THE LAWN AND IS JUST TRYING ACCLIMATE HIMSELF."

Five o'clock Friday at the factory

A Texas doctor, closing out a hectic week, hoped it to be his final medical appointment.

He stared at a Q-tip that was devoid of cotton at both ends.

"This Q-tip must have gotten right up against 5 o'clock Friday at the factory," he muttered....

In the span of one week recently, I felt that my photograph might be placed alongside a "customer is always wrong" essay, thinking my value about the same as a "cottonless" Q-tip.

On three occasions, I was "done wrong."

In each case, I felt as if I'd been hit full in the face with a blivit, a rural term coined by a farm boy whose job it was to feed the hogs. He said a blivit describes a five-gallon bucket filled with 10 gallons of hog slop....

Okay, maybe my beefs didn't rise to that degree of disappointment, but surely the requisites for a "frankfurter foul-up" have been met.

Maybe you've had a similar week or plowed through a "clinker" recently.

Whatever, I have chosen to smile about my misadventures, now making headway toward a "smiley-face" expression from one deeply frowned. I have opted, though, to "rattle some chains" at Best Buy, the Carnation Company and Sam's Club...

Let me offer details in order of chargin. At Best Buy, attempts to buy a new computer went awry. I used my credit card for the purchase, understanding there'd be an additional charge for data transfer and extended warranty.

When it became evident the data transfer to the new computer would be delayed, I decided to forego the purchase. I returned to the sales clerk – the computer box unopened – about a half-hour later, requesting that the transaction be voided. I got the obligatory "no problem" response.

But there was. He had voided the charge for the computer only, and when I questioned him, he said that I would need to void the remaining $180 online....

That didn't sit well with me, but I decided to "play it out." Back home, I was never able to explain my problem to TWO Best Buy "online" responders. After an hour, I gave up.

I sent two emails to Best Buy's media relations email address, but the only responses were two emails indicating that my emails had been received.

Two days later, I received an apologetic phone call from a local Best Buy manager. He promised to void the charge, adding that the sales guy should have given me the option of handling the matter by phone. The clerk didn't, though, perhaps leaning "right up against 5 o'clock Friday at the factory"....

Second is an ongoing issue with plastic cap removals from Carnation Instant Breakfast cartons. Neither my wife nor I can do so without pliers.

I sent emails to the media relation office.

Again, I received emails that mine had arrived, but nothing more. Is this not a legitimate beef, or at least chopped liver?...

Now, on to Sam's, where I purchased new eyeglass lenses in January. The technician indicated that there'd likely be a bill later for charges not covered by insurance. I understood, I really did!

In March, I received the expected bill, responding with a check for $125, expecting a "paid in full" acknowledgement.

Three months later, however, I received a second "statement balance" due for the same amount. With but a vague recollection of the earlier notice, I almost wrote another check. Instead, I called customer service, learning that the bill had been paid, so I could "tear up the second notice"....

I'm in the slack-cutting mode in all three instances.

Many customers, I'm thinking, would simply have written a check for the second eyeglass billing, since there were no "past due" reminders. (I'm just sayin'....)

Let's be eternally vigilant. "Corner-cutting" seems to be prevalent in our world, so we should be vigilant at every turn. Too many, it seems, are "right up against five o'clock Friday at the factory" somewhere, perhaps everywhere....

About 85 veterans of Korea and Vietnam flew from the Panhandle and South Plains on an Honor Flight to Washington, DC, recently.

The National Museum of the Marine Corps was the first stop on Monday, June 3, where Stauder said it was interesting to see what he remembered from his 14 months in Korea. That stop was followed by a trip to the US Navy Memorial.

“The best food I had in the Army was on Navy ship,” Stauder said. “The size of the ships has changed as well as the armaments.”
The Korean War Memorial held a special significance for Stauder due to his service in that conflict.

“I was asked to present the wreath,” he said. “In addition, I found the name of a grade school buddy, who was a forward observer. When the Chinese heard came down, his position was overrun. Lt. Phillip F. Bauer gave his best for our country.”

A short trip to the Lincoln Memorial and the Reflecting Pool was next.

“What a site, so pretty,” Stauder said. “Old Abe was sitting in his chair.”

The final destination was the Vietnam Memorial where Stauder noted the equipment was different from his days in Korea. The Honor Flight group then returned to the airport for their flight back to Lubbock.

“When we arrived, Adian Tyler, Bobby’s wife, was waiting for us for the ride back home,” he said. “We arrived after midnight and hit the hay.”

Writing his recollections down the following evening, Stauder said he still had not recovered from the trip fully, but he was grateful for the opportunity.

“Thank you, South Plains Honor Flight, for allowing me to have the Trip of a Lifetime!”

Texas named best business climate in the nation again

Governor Greg Abbott this week celebrated Texas being recognized the Best Business Climate in the nation for the second year in a row by Business Facilities magazine in their 20th Annual Rankings Report.

"Texas continues to lead the nation as the Best Business Climate," said Governor Abbott. "When businesses succeed, Texans succeed. That is why we are outpacing the nation in job growth and expanding in both existing and emerging industries. Texas offers unmatched business advantages — a welcoming business climate, no corporate or personal income tax, a highly skilled and diverse workforce, easy access to global markets, robust infrastructure, and a reasonable regulatory environment.

Every region of our state provides innovative businesses and hardworking Texans the opportunity to aspire and thrive. I thank Business Facilities magazine for again recognizing Texas as the best in the nation, and I congratulate all of our communities and our local, regional, and statewide economic development partners."

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting June 25, 2024, with Boss Lion Pro Tem Richard Green in charge.

We had 11 Lions in person, two attending virtually, Sweetheart Emma Roys, and five guests this week – Jaxon Robertson, guest of Lion Chuck Robertson; Michael, Matthew, and Monroe Newhouse, guests of Lion Anndria Newhouse; and Ben Estlack, guest of Lion Roger Estlack.

The club discussed plans for next week's July Fourth Bag Bingo and BBQ Cookoff. Entries for both events are still available by calling or texting 806-662-4689 or 806-662-4687 and more details are listed on page one of this week's Enterprise. Lions will gather at 5 p.m. next Wednesday to setup for the events.

The Lions Cow Patty Bingo will be held Saturday, July 6, as part of the annual celebration. Early birds can buy their squares ahead of time. The cow patty bingo cards are at Herring Bank this week.

Lion Ted Shaller reminded everyone that the club is hosting a community blood drive on July 6 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. with the Bloodmobile at the Lions Hall. The blood supply is running short and donations are sorely needed.

The Boss Lion reminded everyone about the Lions Cornhole Hoedown on July 20. Teams are still signing up for that event by calling 806-874-2222.

Lion Ted also said the Christ Kids Ministry is looking for donations and volunteers for its summer lunch program. They feed about 150 kids every weekday. Donations can be given to Lion Ted.
